Your health deserves a moment

Life gets busy—but your health should never take a back seat. Making time for preventive care, like a mammogram, is an act of self-care that could save your life. It's a quick, safe, and effective screening that can detect breast cancer early, before any symptoms appear, giving you more options and better outcomes.

When should you get a Mammogram?

- Age 40: Get a baseline mammogram.
- Ages 40–50: You should get a mammogram every two years.
- Ages 50 and older: You should switch to yearly screenings.

Screening should continue until the age of 75, or beyond if recommended by your Lead Care Provider.

Get a mammogram at any age if recommended by your doctor based on risk factors.

High-risk individuals

Women at high risk for breast cancer may need both a breast MRI and a mammogram every year, usually starting at age 30. This includes those who:

- Have a 20–25% or higher lifetime risk of breast cancer (based on family history)
- Have a BRCA1 or BRCA2 gene mutation
- Have a first-degree relative with a BRCA gene mutation (and haven't had genetic testing themselves)
- Received radiation therapy to the chest before age 30
- Have Li-Fraumeni, Cowden, or Bannayan-Riley-Ruvalcaba syndrome, or a first-degree relative with one of these syndromes

If you've been putting it off, today is a great day to take that first step. Use this directory to find trusted diagnostic imaging providers near you. Prioritize your health, your peace of mind, and your future—because early detection saves lives, and your health is worth it.
